

Have you got a burning wish to share the work you do with others in gerontological nursing?

Are you working in a setting where good things are happening –where ideas turn into pilot projects, where evidence-based practice is the accepted value for care, or where a new policy is tried and tested with staff support? The editorial team welcomes manuscripts from clinicians that describe, evaluate or test innovative programs and services that serve older Canadians and their families and contribute to gerontological nursing! These Clinical Corner Manuscripts should not exceed ten pages and the editors plan to have at least one clinically based manuscript in every issue.

All manuscripts should include an introduction to the idea, program, service or policy and progress logically to a conclusion. Submissions will be assessed by reviewers, one of whom will be in active clinical practice. The context can be from:

- community settings
- rural settings
- northern settings
- long-term care
- acute care

For further information, contact, Lorna Guse, Editor-in-Chief: lorna.guse@umanitoba.ca

Perspectives, Journal of the Canadian Gerontological Nursing Association